

LEADING POSITIVE CHANGE

Do you want to learn to maximize your unique skills and strengths? Are you interested in developing your leadership abilities to bring out the best in others? This workshop will expand leaders' capacity to lead positive change and inspire leadership in others.

The focus of this workshop will be on developing leadership capacities to lead self, others, and the organization based on Appreciative Inquiry and other strengths-based and high-engagement approaches. This workshop will provide approaches, tools, and practical first steps for applying these methodologies (and philosophy) to your work and to life.

You will increase individual awareness, understanding, and ability to lead positive change in your organization through a combination of didactic, skill building, experiential-learning and group process dialogue/reflection.

We will help participants to further connect to what they care about, while helping them to engage in new ways of thinking, organizing and achieving their highest potential. Skill practice and action learning will be designed to create a safe and honest space for sharing reflections/insights among participants while applying curriculum insights to everyday work situations.

- Increase self-awareness around leadership style
- Seek out and elevate strengths in yourself and others
- Understand the theory and practice of Appreciative Inquiry (AI)
- Reframe problems in order to identify opportunities and inspire positive change
- Ask positive questions in ways that foster learning, connection, and trust
- Understand the basic science and research around positive psychology and neuroscience
- Create ownership, buy-in and engagement across next level leadership
